

GTMO has learned throughout the year

Fear is not a factor — Adam Fisher shakes and squirms more than the squid he has in his mouth during the GTMO '2006 Teen Center Fear Factor' challenge. Forty-four students from the W.T. Sampson High School tested their fear on Friday, March 31, at the Windjammer pool.

Push yourself to the limits — Area athletes endured rigorous regiments of kayaking, biking and running during the GTMO's Extreme Adventure competition on March 4. They were competing for the championship crown and a possible chance to represent Guantanamo Bay at a regional contest slated for later that year. The competition began from the Sailing Center at the Marina with the first contest, a 1-mile kayak relay.

Diversity of cultures is extremely important — Matthew James Adkins (Eagle Bear), entertains the large crowd at the Down-town Lyceum on Nov. 19. Other tribes that showed their Native American spirit were Cree, Aztec, Chero-kee, Pawnee, Seneca, Lumbee and Lakota Indians.

Sports should be about fun — Blake Smaw smiles as he rounds third base after hitting an in-the-park home run in the first inning of the first game of the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Little League Baseball season.

"In every man there is something wherein I may learn of him, and in that I am his pupil," said Ralph Waldo Emerson, American Poet, 1803-1882.
